

Self-confidence Really Matters in an Election Speech

By ?

There are many factors that can contribute to a person's success in an election speech, such as intelligence, honesty, appearance and so on. Of all the possible elements, I believe self-confidence is the most important for the following reasons.

To begin with, when people are full of confidence, they believe in themselves and know for sure that they will make it, which in return gives them the courage to present themselves. Secondly, confident people do not easily quit. If they make mistakes in the speech, they will make an effort to maintain composure and continue on. Last but not least, self-confidence and self-reliance are the main components of a strong character.

In conclusion, we should always keep in mind that an election speech calls for confidence, but not arrogance.
