

An interview With the Winner of 5000m Long-Distance Running

By Li Yanwen

Wen Fangyu, a student from the Information Department, is one of the most distinguished track and field boy athletes in our college. He has shared his thought in an online interview. The following are the interview segments.

A: Congratulations!

B: Thanks.

A: So, what first came to your mind after being the winner of 5000m long-distance running?

B: Well, I owe my success to both my coach and my hard work.

A: What occurred to you the first time you caught up with another competitor?

B: Actually, no special feeling then, I was not in my best state because of a severe cold. I had been in isolation for a few days and was just released before the competition. I thought I would lose the sports meeting medal then, but ultimately, I was lucky.

A: Wow! It's true that you would certainly do better if you hadn't caught a cold. I think you've done great!

B: Haha, thank you really.

A: Ok, I know that you've also broken the provincial record of Zhejiang, right?

B: Yeah, that's right.

A: And you've been admired by many people now.

B: Yeah, I'm proud that I've broken the record, and my efforts have paid off finally.

A: Well, how long have you been training?

B: I started my training when I was a high school sophomore.

A: Will you take long-distance running as your future career or you just treat it as a hobby?

B: Actually, what I want is to become a university undergraduate, academic degree is important anyway, and I'll choose physical education as my major.

A: That's great! I'm also a sports lover. Would you coach me?

B: Of course! In fact I've done some coaching. They all do well in running. Did you see that one of my runners won the first place in the other group? You can join them at anytime if you like.

A: Really? The apple doesn't fall far from the tree. I will if I have any chance to meet them. Thank you very much for the interview today and good luck to you.

B: Thank you.
