

A Trip to Fangshan

By Chen Tengfei from BE 0816

Every now and then we get the itch to travel. This phenomenon, sometimes called wanderlust, may explain why people spend so much on trips to interesting places. For me, I couldn't agree more. Travel brings to me a relaxing sensation. The extraordinary thing is that my feelings are more special when I am surrounded by nature. Fangshan is famous for its breath-taking scenery, which was very attracting to me. To experience it myself, I went to Fangshan together with my friends.

Fangshan, which belongs to Mount Yandang, stretches between Wenzhou and Taizhou. Looking from a certain perspective, it looks like a square box. That is the reason why it is called Fangshan. It has solemn temples and flourishing streets. It is a custom for people to burn incense and worship Buddha. People truly believe that Buddha will bless them and make their wishes to come true. Perhaps Buddha is their spiritual pillar. In the street, you can buy some special souvenirs to keep as memories of the pleasant trip. A trip to Fangshan will also give you a glimpse of the happy lifestyle of the local people who are well known for their warm hearts and friendliness.

The mountaintop is Fangshan's major focus. It is also the perfect place for a walk. And a walk around the mountain top is a charming and happy event. Clear lakes lie next to each other. The green water shimmers in the soft breeze and warm sunshine. Further more, there is a harbor near the lake. Visitors who get tired can rest in the harbor.

In closing, Fangshan is a paradise for visitors and a walk around Fangshan is a feast for eyes. With Fangshan's beautiful lakes, crystal clear waters, emerald green mountains, spectacular scenery and kind-hearted people, it is a perfect place for a relaxing vocation.

The green water shimmers in the soft breeze and warm sunshine

The arbor floats in trees and lakes, like a crystal clear emerald

Breathtaking natural wonders