

Class Reunion Party

By Pan Shuman from BE 0816

With the winter holiday coming, the first thing we are to do is go back home, stay together with our families, talk about the school life and exchange the wonders we have seen far away from home. Meanwhile, we will never forget to call our friends after one or two semesters. We must have great curiosity to know what changes he or she has made, whether she becomes more beautiful and lives a better life in her college.

A class reunion party was thus born at the request of our classmates. Just one day before the New Year Eve, my high school classmates had a reunion party in our school where all of us would easily think of our past happy time during high school. At the party, we took photos to celebrate the reunion. It felt good to have talks in our classroom in which we had ever had lessons. We also played basketball, because we girls won five basketball matches during the second year in high school, and that's what we were proud of. We felt so close to each other as if we had never been separated.

After the meal, we left school to have supper. Throughout the meal, we talked about the lives in college. Some of my classmates were so excellent that they got scholarship. Their spare time was devoted to reading and doing homework. Others remained the same as they were in high school, that is, they neither did very well in their study nor failed in the exam. Still others were just hanging out on campus, not caring about their lessons. As one of our teachers told us, "Different attitude towards study in college will make big difference!" He was right.

Time flies! It has been half a year since we graduated from high school. Everyone has made some changes. But we still hold on to the same dream that we hope to live a life free from trouble and can be happy every second.
